Monthly Overview

January 2009

Continuing turmoil

The gloomy mood of year-end continued to prevail on stock markets in January as participants were guessing whether numerous bailout packages could manage to revive the economy. All the main regions remained largely in red last month except Latin America, which fell by less than half percent. The largest correction was seen in GCC countries.

Probably the most important indicator in January was Americans' growing savings for the first time during the last 30 years. Although it seemed to be a temporary trend triggered by 2008 tax rebates, now it appears to be taking hold a lasting course. It is not surprising since financial investments and property which created wealth for many people have substantially depreciated and unemployment rate increased. More savings mean less consumption, which in turn indicates that a stimulus to revive stagnating economy will have to come from government spending or export earnings. In a shorter perspective the solution is already found and accepted in the form of bailout packages, in a longer term the hope rests on the export growth.

The latter though leads to the possibility that even though the US entered the economic crisis first, it will not start recovering from it in the same sequence. The reason is that in order to increase export, some countries of the world have to recover and demonstrate an increased demand for import.

Movers and shakers in January 2009

- US President Barack Obama's economic stimulus plan (775 bn USD) including tax cuts and growing government expenses
- Despite earlier statements ECB cut its interest rate by 0.5 p.p. to 2.0%
- Germany's business climate index rose to 83 in January from a record low of 82.7 in December
- According USA plan Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. will buy „toxic“ assets from banks by creating „bad bank“
- US economy contracted by a 3.8% y/y in '08 4Q (-5.5% y/y expected)

- 1.1 mn of workers lost jobs in USA during '08, unemployment rate up to 7.2%
- Russia's ruble fell to record low since 1998 (36.6675 RUB for USD)
- Gas war between Russia and Ukraine
- EC forecasts that the euro-zone economy will shrink by 1.9% in 2009
- Japanese industrial production fell a record 9.6% in December

Export will save all?

Export is turning popular in general. One can hear about it to be the main driver of economy. The truth is though that each country's export is some other country's import meaning that everyone cannot base their hopes and plans on the inflows from international trade, at least not in a few years perspective. Therefore, the drive behind a new cycle has to come from countries that are able and need to grow household consumption. These are developing countries, primarily China, Brazil and India. As long as there are no signs of this, we make new investments trying to capitalise on short-term opportunities.

Fund Manager's Comment

At the very start of the month we used higher prices and lowered positions in different investments – selling Asian, Russian, Japanese and Scandinavian stocks. Besides that we take profit by selling closed end bond fund as discount to NAV had contracted significantly.

Strong beginning of the year was followed by weak end of the month so fund benefited from lower stock exposure.

At the same time we bought Lithuanian telecom (TEO) stocks as at current level dividend yield close to 15% could be expected.

At the end of the month higher than average weighting in the fund was given to cash. February however begun for the fund with increasing positions in Asia and Russia.

Fund Manager's Comment

The first month of new 2009 year did not coddle investors with superb results. Challenges facing the world economy were attenuated by Ukraine-Russia gas conflict. Fleeing increased political risk investors punished Russian Sberbank (-20.91%), Raiffeisen International (-17.10%), which is actively working in Ukraine although the bank could boast of record-high results. Drastically downgraded forecasts for Poland's economy scared away foreign investors. As a result, Fund's Polish positions contracted by almost 22% during last month.

On the other hand, Baltic countries non correlating continued to demonstrate stunning growth. Fund's positions in this region jumped by 13.14%, signs of recovery were seen in Slovenian market (+1.05%), which fell dramatically in December. Serbian market balanced at zero level (-1.76%). In January Fund continued reduction of Hungarian positions, however it increased exposure to Baltic countries and Serbia.

Fund Manager's Comment

Persian markets fell 10-20% in January. After healthy rise in December, Qatar was the worst performer as Qatargas-1 was shut down for two weeks due to technical problems and some profit taking before quarterly results. Dubai real estate is keeping investors away from stock markets.

Qatari banks have reported operating results matching expectations but net income has been affected by impairment losses on investments. Loan quality hasn't deteriorated and Qatar National Bank is expecting 20% growth in 2009. Qatari banking sector dividend yield is attractive at 7-14%.

Qatar is planning to announce its largest ever budget for 2009 with focus on education, health, infrastructure projects and real estate to support GDP and continue its strategic development projects.
